WEDNESDAY MARCH 25, 1885.

A Divided Party find the following telegram the Wheeling Register: WASHINGTON, March 22 .- A local per says : Senator Gorham, ex-Sena stt, of Ponnsylvania, will begin the ing daily newspaper in this city on Menday, May 4th. The paper is to be an Administration organ.

We know personally two of the ger tlemen named above, and are not inclined to think that they will ever become practical editors, though of course they may start a paper of their own. An air of plausibility surrounds the report, however, growing out of the fact treated Mr. RANDALL and his friends as they deserve to be treated. Mesars, DAVIS, SCOTT, and GORMAN all being, like him, advocates of so much protection to American industries as will cover the difference between the prices of labor in this country and the prices of labor in Europe. In other words, they advocate just the same sort of protection to which the Chicago platform pledges the national Democratic party, and to which the new Secretary of the Treasury committed simself in the interview which was reported in our issue of yesterday.

We deprecate divisions in the Demo cratic party. Nobody can point to one line which we have ever penned questioning the Democracy of any man because he did not agree with us on the tariff question. So long as the Government is compelled to raise annually ndreds of millions of dollars of revenue from customs duties, it is folly to talk of resorting to free trade; and if free trade is out of the question, and if all good Democrats favor a revision of the tariff, as we are assured the Administration does, what is there to quarrel about? Is it the difference between a tariff of 40 and one of 45 that he does not admit that Congress has the right to pass a tariff " for protection only." He advocates such a rebureau? Well, if we are all agreed enough to warrant the imposition upon him of strangers whom he cannot imthat all internal taxes ought to be abolished, it follows necessarily that we are all agreed that the tariff shall be so remodelled as to produce revenue enough to support the Government. Is there any doubt so far? Is there any other way to raise the money?

How much money does the Government need every year? Last year the mainly rely for the successful and creditreceipts into the Treasury were $195,-067,489 from customs and $121,586,-072 from internal taxes, or about $317,-000,000. Now, isn't it a clear case that if we are in earnest when we say form of the civil service, in its highest we favor the abolition of all internal and best seuse, becomes impracticable, we favor the abolition of all internal taxes and the raising of $300,000,000 a year from customs duties, we cannot quarrel amongst ourselves as to the stee of there duties? We must frame a revenue tariff. We shall be compelled to have the revenue, and therefore we must adopt the only method of obtaining that revenue.

The establishment of a new paper in Washington means a divided party there and wherever else the two rival papers can effect that result. We hope, therefore, that there is no truth in the rumor above referred to, but we also hope that the Post will cease to belittle Mr. RANDALL and his friends.

Again: The new paper is to Administration organ, it is said. This we do not credit. Mr. CLEVELAND eems to us to be one of the last men in the world to countenance the establishment of either a Protection or anti-Protection organ in Washington. He has distributed his favors impartially, so far as we know, between the Cartes and the Randallites. We take it for granted that Mr. MANNING was selected for Secretary of the Treasury because the President knew that he agreed with him on all questions growing out of the revenues of the Government. Mr. MANNING's views we reported yesterday. If these are the President's views, as we suppose they are, then we do not see why Virginia Democrat cannot consist-utly be an Administration Democrat of Dr as the tariff is concerned; nor can we understand the necessity for an Administration organ in Washington.

"Mr. Watterson," says the Richard (Va.) Disputch, "who is opposed the abolition of the Internal-Revenue

Very well. We give you the benefit of your own disclaimer. But we fear that there are still hot embers lying near our Louisville contemporary Nevertheless, we are pleased to have its own assurance that his anger is eine grosses nichts-"a great nothing," as a friend of ours translates it.

The appouncement of Sir STAFFORD

NORTHCOTE that he would retire from the leadership of the Conservative party in the House of Commons at the end of the present session of Parliament will not occasion much surprise. Sir STAF-FORD NORTHCOTE has, it appears, recognized at this late date what the world knew long ago-that he is totally incompetent to cope with Mr. (iLAD-STONE, and that in his weakness consists in some measure Mr. GLAD-STONE'S strength. If during the debate on the resent motion for a vote of censure the Conservatives had had a leader who could have put their position before the country with force, who had shown himself capable of forming a government, and whom they had confidence in. Mr. GLADSTONE would in all probability have gone out of power. In fact it would seem that if Mr. GLADSTONE had not known that Sir STAFFORD NORTHCOTE was not the man for the crisis, he would not have dared to take the risks he has taken. The manner in which Mr. GLADSTONE has treated the opposition amounts almost to contempt, and cannot be explained except upon the hypothesis that he does not be lieve that the Conservatives can, when it comes squarely to the pinch, furnish at the Washington Post has not a leader. He acts at times with an independence that suggests a consciousness that not only his own party, but the opposition as well, are dependent upon him for brains enough to run the Government.

Sound Doctrine. We are pleased to learn that Secretary LAMAR intends to maintain his rights as the head of one of the Executive departments of the Government, and that the Washington Post, which had, we supposed, gone off after strange gods, upholds him in his purpose. The Post of yesterday has the following excellent article :

It is of the very first importance that the clerks who hold direct and trusted relations to the heads of departments, and for whose acts the latter are imme diately responsible, should be men of their own selection, independent of all outside advice or technical instructions There are numbers of positions under the Government for which the applicants require some better endorsement and higher standard of efficiency than any the civil-service examiners can fur

No man can safely or consistently, with a proper sense of his responsibilities, assume control of a great depart-ment of the Government, excepting with the distinct and inviolable understanding that those upon whom he is to able discharge of the duties devolved upon him shall be men of his own choice, in whose integrity and ability he has entire reliance.

Without such liberty of action, reand the system it seeks to erect a farce. Now that strikes us as sound doc trine: but how it is to be recouciled with the civil-service law, we know not. The Mr. EATON spoken of by the Post is one of the Civil-Service Commissioners. If the Secretary of the Interior, or any other member of But what has the new paper in Wash- the Cabinet, has to go to Mr. EATON, ington to do with all this? Just this: a bitter Republican, to learn his duty, we may as well bid farewell to the Government which our fathers left us.

> Hon. HENRY R. JACKSON, of Georgia, the new Minister to Mexico. is the author of a poem, written during the Mexican war, which we have often seen ascribed to STONEWALL JACKson. Perhaps the promotion of the Georgia General will enable him to keep his laurels hereafter.

" Have passed" is good.

"The power behind the throne," to whose influence the appointments so far made by the President is ascribed, is a sextette—Randall, Manning, Whitney, W. L. Scott, Smith M. Weed, and Samuel J. Tilden .- New York Tribune.

Stuff! You will find soon that there is no such power behind the throne.

But are we to understand that when those who represent three fourths of the Democratic party on the tariff issue that is a curious epithet to apply to a speak with timely caudor as to the course of current events they are to be accused of stirring up faction, whilst the organs of the other side are free to fill their columns day after day with misrepresentations and riftification of

Not at all. We do not object to "time candor." But we do object to such hrases as "Mr. RANDALL and his corporal's guard"; "small and scheming faction "; "he will find a pretext to betray it" (the Democratic party); "he is the attorney of subsidy," &c., &c. If these phrases are merited, the men to whom they are applied are not Democrats at all. But this we do not admit ; therefore, the phrases ought not to have been employed.

Three fourths of the Democrats in Congress in 1878 voted for the silver bill. Three fourths of the Democrats in the last Congress were bimetallists. Three fourths of the Democrats elected to the next Congress are bimetallists. Have they the right to denounce the other one fourth of the Democrats who are monometallists as traitors to the Democratic party? Is there to be an issue raised on the tariff and none on the silver question? The Chicago platform declares for both silver and gold. Is Mr. CLEVELAND a traitor? It declares for such a tariff as Mr. RAN-DALL favors. Is he'a traitor?

To the Editor of the Dispatch Civil-service law as the bill passed through Congress with the sanction of Democratic votes appears to be one thing, but civil-service rules as made by a Republican Board of Commission ers, though one of them, it is said, calls himself a Democrat, is quite another thing, and does a very positive injus-tice to a large class of the most worth y persons in both parties.

By the most careful examination an liberal construction of the civil-service law as it passed Congress there can be no possible justification for Rule 12 made by the commission to exclude all persons over forty-five years of age from general or competitive examina-There are a very few inconside rable exceptions to this rule. The great mass of persons over forty-five years of age are excluded from holding any office, under the beneficent ruling of a Republican Civil-Service Board of Commissioners, ranging from $720 to $1,800 and over, and subject, as most all are, to civil-service rules. Seven men out of ten are just in their prime of physical strength and health at from forty-five to fifty-five; nine out of ten have just acquired their maximum of mental capacity and business experience between forty-five and fifty-five. In all business pursuits these are the men mainly looked to and relied upon. Cabinet officers, heads of bureaus, and almost all the men in all the important relations of life-even civil-service comnissioners-are men over forty-five What encouragement to younger men to make the most of themselves when they are so soon and unjustly to be discriminated against when barely at the prime of life! What have we all been working for until we are forty-five? To be laid upon the shelf. How soon reform can be brought into disrepute when it is overdone. The absurdity of the thing is so apparent and suggestive of so much more than I have said that I need not pursue the subject farther, and can speak feelingly, being one of the poble army of the proscribe OVER FORTY-FIVE.

The reason of the rule is, we suppose to be found in the supposition of the men who made it, that if officers are to hold for life, or during good behavior, they must be pensioned when they become too old, or unable from any other cause, to perform the duties of their offices. Therefore, the appointees ought to be under forty-five. We have de this objection to the civil-service law-namely, that it is the forerunn of a long civil-pension list.

> river. In the course of his travels he made up his mind to settle down on a fruit farm for the rest of his days, and he bargained for the Pear of Bis Usyant place, at Marlborough, agreeing to pay $5,000 for it. He made a deposit of $500. The owner died in the interval, and his eldest son was appointed executor. The widow of the deceased fruit-grower was endowed with a life interest by the will of her husband, and she refused to sign the necessary papers giving Germuska possession. The Bohemian made sevepossession. The Bohemian made seve-ral trips from New York to Marlborough to try and get his money back. The matter came before Judge Westbrook this afternoon in this city. It was stated in court that Germuska, who is feeble and nearly ninety years of age, had been kept from applying for the money due him by threats of being "blown up" and "torn to pieces," made by irresponsible parties and not by the heirs, if he ever came to Marlborough again. He made no attempt to recover during the past six years. In the mean time the exrendered an accounting, but failed to say anything about the Bohemian's $500, and over that amount the heirs, brothers, and sisters have been squabbling for a year or more. The brook to compel the executor to divide All hands believed John the money. All hands believed John Germuska to be dead and buried, his silence of six years being considered proof positive. When he appeared in court this afternoon with his counsel, a Broadway lawyer named Levy, there was surprise and consternation among a number of the beirs. It was shown to the Judge that the presence of the tottering Bohemian was brought about by a correspondent of the Times, who ran across Germuska while obtaining data for on article among the Bohemian and Polish cigar- and box-makers in the crowded tenements on the east side. New York. It appeared that the Times's correspondent months age had been casually informed of the fight that was going on between the Wygants over the Bohemian's money by one of the lawyers retained in the case, and keeping in mind the description and the name of the missing man, the result was his discovery and his appearance in court to-day. Germuska old his story with difficulty, as he is deaf and speaks but little English. A great deal of testimony was taken be fore Germuska was sworn, and as soon as he had told his story it was apparen that he was entitled to the money, and the Judge so decided. The Bohemian said he was afraid he would lose hi life if he persisted in demanding his money. He wept for joy when he was told the money was his once more. "Timely Warning."

To the Editor of the Dispatch : From what has recently appeared in the Dispatch and the State it seems to be pretty well ascertained that the President will be guided by the recommendations of Virginia Democratic congressmen as to the filling of Federal offices in the State. If the President has adopted that policy, then it is clear that gentlemen who may be recommended for positions should come well up to the qualifications laid down by President himself. The true Demo eratic people of Virginia, as the State has well said, are in no humor " to be trifled with," and so will closely watch the action of their congressmen. Two things must be done if there is any disposition to respect the wishes of Democrats of the State, and who have never ceased to advocate Democratic principles, and from the start have fought Mahoneism recommended by our congressmen must be men whose capacity to fill the positions they may be named for canuquestioned, and whose adelity and houesty are beyond suspicion. That much is due to Mr. Cleveland and the principles on which he was elected. If, how ever, true civil service is to be partially slaughtered, hoping thereby "to run the Democratic machine to more advantage," then the Democratic people will not expect to see gentlemen recom-mended who under their management run the party from power in their vicinity to a complete rout. I think I voice the feelings of seven eighths of the intelligent Democratic people of the State when I say that they will expect that gentlemen of their party who have ever been true to its principles shall have precedence over those who may have wandered from the fold. It is true that we are taught in the Bible "that the last shall be first, and the first shall be last "; but I do not think that even the good old Democratic party has yet been educated up to so high a standard as that. If such was the fact, very certain it is we would hear nothing said about this man's or that man's probable capacity "to ma-nipulate his office for the benefit of the party." On the contrary, the appoint ment would be made for the benefit of all the people; and in that case it would be decided solely on a man's real capacity to fill the position and his fidelity and honesty, as exemplified by his whole life. General Mahone is far from being politically dead, and so he, too, will watch closely any errors our leaders may make. Consequently it is to be hoped that such leaders will so act as to satisfy the country that their wish is to run the Government for the benefit of the people, and not for the benefit of a party. It is positively certain that had the Republican party acted on that principle it would now be in power. So many of their office-holders were cans had to back them up. This fact certainly ought to teach sensible men that it is not always true that running the patronage of the Government for
